

Kennedy, Ike Meet to Rally Full Support

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy meets with former President Dwight D. Eisenhower today in an evident bid to rally strong national support for critical steps which he may consider necessary to deal with the increasingly dangerous Cuban crisis.

A White House announcement of the session—at Camp David, Md.—emphasized Cuba as the topic for the conference. But it did not rule out the prospect that Kennedy could discuss with his predecessor a broad range of intensifying cold war conflicts with the Soviet Union.

Before flying to Camp David by helicopter Kennedy met with the National Security Council, presumably to discuss possible future moves against the pro-Communist government of Cuba in the wake of this week's abortive anti-Castro invasion.

In the midst of these developments, the President was reported to have ordered a thorough study of reasons for the defeat of the rebel invasion attempt which began last weekend with the United States' moral support—and, it was generally believed here, with some backing of U. S. money and arms.

The President was understood to be concerned about what some authorities called a failure to calculate accurately in advance the strength of Prime Minister Fidel Castro's military reaction to the rebel assault as well as possible errors in intelligence.

White House news secretary Pierre Salinger disclosed Friday night that Kennedy and Eisenhower would meet at Camp David, the Catoctin Mountain retreat near Gettysburg, Pa., which Eisenhower used for conferences with foreign leaders.

A Pretty Dear Family Gathers

"Don't Fence Me In" is the theme song of creatures other than cowboys, birds, and mosquitoes. According to Mrs. William Gilbert, Route 1, Washington, it also applies to her pet deer. That's right, a deer.

About a year ago her son brought the young doe in from the woods surrounding the Gilberts' farm-home. She was a fawn then, complete with spots, but she lost them at about six months of age. Her name? It's Jenny, and she'll answer to it when called.

Jenny was raised on a bottle. In order to know where she is, the Gilberts have put a collar on her with a bell attached to it. You see, Jenny is friendly as only a pet deer can be, but you can't see her unless she wants you to because of her natural protective coloring.

She likes many kinds of animals, including dogs and cows, but she has a hearty dislike for cats. Not even the deer hounds bother her, and she sometimes roams in the fields with the cows. When the latter happens, she comes when the cows are called in at night. Maybe she thinks she is part beaver then. But she forgets that at other times and is, no doubt, delighted that other deer are in the nearby woods for her to meet occasionally and "renew old acquaintances."

Other things she likes are playing in light rain and eating flowers. She is intelligent, and after she was switched for "grazing" in the Gilbert rose garden, she has left it strictly alone. Her eating habits sound like she has a goat for a distant relative, for she is fond of crackers and bread, violets, apples, cigarettes, and coconut cake! Perhaps her favorite food of all, though, is corn. She is fed twice a day and certainly knows when it's time for a meal.

We mentioned earlier that Jenny is friendly, which is true, but she also has a mind of her own. For instance, she refuses to be led by her collar and will paw the ground with her sharp little hoofs in protest. But ask her to follow voluntarily, and she will come after individuals or even follow a wagon.

The pet doe and children have a mutual love for one another. During the past Christmas season, Jenny was taken into the Gilbert home to have pictures made around the Christmas tree. She didn't mind at all and behaved like a perfect lady. The Gilberts' grandchildren had a particularly fine time with the unusual addition to the family.

Though she is permitted to run about the farm unrestrained, did not run away from the sound of firecrackers as a dog will always do. The 50 pound doe is no trouble and is gentle as can be. Since she was found and brought to the Gilbert home, she has only been enclosed for a week.

Iron Hand to Weed Castro Opposition

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press News Analyst

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The news from Havana today suggests that the hand of discipline has been applied with the aim of smothering the last breath of political resistance by coldly methodical methods imported from the Communist police states.

The developments hint at the possibility that the Soviet Embassy has informed the Cuban regime of Moscow's waning impatience with the Cuban government's wild disorganization. When Fidel Castro finally is in position to raise the ever-ready voice which has not yet been heard on the airwaves since the invasion began, he may find himself in the unaccustomed role of figurehead and front for a government which has been taken over in all but name by the disciplined Communists.

Since Sunday, Castro's voice has not been heard. Cubans have been told he is at the battlefield. There has been no word of the other ranking leaders—Castro's fanatical younger brother Raul, who heads the armed forces; Ernesto Guevara, the Communist boss of the economy; Antonio Nunez Jimenez, the powerful and ruthless head of the Agrarian Reform Department.

The regime's radio continues to promise over and over a huge rally for May Day, which has been appropriated by the Communist world for propaganda spectacles, hinting that the chiefs of the Castro revolution will be on hand to preside.

May Day is 10 days away, which could afford time for organization for the Communist bloc's swarm of diplomats, technicians and advisers to entrench themselves behind the scene and demand the sort of order Moscow gets from its satellite regimes.

There was supposed to be a big victory celebration rally Thursday in Havana. The Cuban government radio announced it. But there was no rally. Some time between the announcement early in the day and the scheduled hour, 9 p. m., it was canceled.

A rally without Castro to whip it into a frenzy with his marathon oratory would have looked strange to his fanatical followers. Indeed, it would be difficult for any other personality in the regime to hold a huge crowd for long without the expectation that he would be on hand.

One would have expected, in the circumstances, that a rally would be the first order of business if the Castro regime was the master of its own destiny. But there was business to be taken care of first, and apparently there were businesslike people about to insist that it be attended to before turning to another of the spectacles for which Castro has been famous.

Junta Defies DeGaulle in Algeria Coup

By JEAN PAILLARDIN

ALGIERS (AP)—A military junta of retired generals backed by tough paratroops seized power in Algiers in defiance of President Charles de Gaulle today and claimed control over the vast territory.

The bloodless coup was carried out between midnight and dawn. It sent a chill running through metropolitan France and caused consternation in Tunisia where the Algerian nationalists who have been in revolt against France for almost seven years were preparing for peace talks.

It was not immediately clear how tight a hold the insurgents had on Algeria and De Gaulle sent one of his top lieutenants, Algerian Affairs Minister Louis Joxe, by jet plane from Paris to find out.

The insurgent leaders took over the government buildings of Algiers and in a broadcast over Algiers Radio claimed leadership over all of Algeria and the Sahara.

Although the rebels led by Gen. Maurice Challe, former French commander in chief in Algeria, claimed to control the whole territory this was disputed by the De Gaulle government in Paris. It said loyal soldiers were in control outside the City of Algiers.

Premier Michel Debre said the rising was "a premeditated and undisciplined act" by retired generals. He said they had seized the government buildings in Algiers but "in all the rest of the territory the situation is normal in every respect. The government is taking all necessary measures to insure that force rests with the law."

Alone with Challe the rebel communique broadcast by Algiers Radio was also signed by Paratroop Gen. Raoul Salan, who played a prominent role in the 1958 rising in Algeria that brought De Gaulle back to power.

Salan recently has exiled himself in Spain. It was not believed that he had arrived on Algerian soil but he was expected momentarily.

The rebel communique said "The powers held by the civil authorities have entirely passed to military authorities."

French officers who have fought the Algerian nationalists in the 6½-year rebellion have been among the bitterest opponents of De Gaulle's self-determination policy for Algeria.

Other generals who joined the revolt were Air Force Gen. Edmond Juchard and Army Gen. Henri Zeller.

After the communique, Algiers Radio said, "The individuals having participated directly in the attempt to abandon Algeria and the Sahara will be placed under arrest and brought before a military tribunal."

The radio declared a "state of siege" in Algeria but promised that all "fundamental liberties and guarantees assured by the constitution are entirely maintained."

The first reaction among Europeans in the city was one of elation. Cars streamed through the streets blasting their horns in the three-two cadence that means "Algerie, Francaise (Algeria is French)."

How many troops were involved in the sudden coup was unknown. Nor was it clear yet whether the army claim to control of all Algeria was true.

There was no violence in the pre-dawn military rising.

AIDC Gives Land Back to Hospital

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The Arkansas Industrial Development Commission today returned to the State Hospital 1,500 acres of Saline County land which the commission got in 1957 for industrial use.

Act 214 of 1961 required return of the property and the commission passed a resolution to effect the transfer without comment at a meeting today.

The land has an appraised value of $232,500. It is near the State Hospital's Benton unit.

AIDC Director William P. Rock said it was hoped that a Saline County group would buy the land from the state hospital and hold it for possible industrial development.

Rock said the AIDC was unable to dispose of the land during the past four years because it could not find a suitable industry for it. "This is one of those deals where the land would be ideal for a certain type of industry, but we have not been able to find one which is interested in it," he said.

Rock said the land is divided naturally into three areas, each about 500 acres. One third is subject to flooding, one third is hilly and the other third is ideal for a plant.

Rock said the State Hospital board wants to sell the property but that he hoped it can be saved for industry.

Havana Is a City of Fear, Suspicion

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Havana was described as a city of fear and suspicion today in a dispatch from the Cuban capital. A new wave of arrests there reached into almost every family. Suspects jammed into swollen jails. Living conditions were described as growing worse.

The government radio network said Prime Minister Fidel Castro, unseen in public for almost a week, was personally directing mop-up operations in the interior against the surviving rebel invaders who are trying to overthrow his pro-Communist regime.

A Havana television station Friday night prepared the people for big "Castro Day" victory celebrations with a five-hour live interview of prisoners the government claims it captured during the abortive invasion by Cuban exiles.

One prisoner was Jose Miro Torres, son of the top Cuban rebel leader Jose Miro Cardona. Miro Torres bit his lip and ruckled in his chair as he admitted that his force was defeated and his operation ended in failure.

The rebel leader's son said on Havana television that he had been well treated since his capture. All his comments were in the form of answers to his interrogators.

"Then it is not just to say that Cuban militiamen behave like human beasts?" Miro Torres was asked.

"Absolutely not," he replied before the cameras.

When asked by the panel of interviewers what he and his men expected to find when they landed, Miro Torres said:

"We thought the militia and the army would join us."

"That is what you were told. But what did you find?"

"They fought us very hard and defeated us."

"Then you were defeated?" Miro Torres was asked.

"Yes," he answered.

Miro Torres also responded "no" when asked if any appreciable number of invaders had escaped.

Jose Miro Cardona appealed from his New York headquarters to Pope John XXIII, asking the pontiff's intercession to halt firing squad executions of captured rebels. A Havana dispatch Friday said the number shot had reached 39 in three days.

Miro Cardona said in his cable to the Vatican that the Pope's voice, "exemplifying Christian charity, could save the lives of many idealistic men" by intervening through the International Red Cross. Miro Cardona also messaged the presidents of 11 Latin American nations, asking them to "act promptly" to prevent more executions.

Some rebel sources in Miami said between 500 and 1,500 guerrillas were headed for Cuba for a new invasion assault. The anti-Castro radio on Swan Island, off the Central American coast, said small landings had already been made but no other source confirmed this.

The rebel radio broadcast mysterious instructions to three battalions, two squadrons and an air group at 4 a. m. today. It told one battalion to advance and the two squadrons how far to proceed. It instructed the air group to cover a certain position by number. The signals were heard clearly at an Associated Press monitoring station in Miami.

President Kennedy was to meet today with former President Eisenhower at Camp David, Md., to discuss at lunch the recent events in Cuba. The two have not met since Kennedy took office.

AP Correspondent Tom Price reported from Cuba that an underground source there complained bitterly over what he saw as the reasons for the failure of last weekend's invasion attempt.

The source said the rebels neglected to seize radio stations for rallying the masses and did not furnish themselves with proper aerial support.

Doctors Ask Drive Against 2 Big Killers

WASHINGTON (AP)—A panel of eminent physicians told President Kennedy today that an offensive against the two biggest killers in the United States—heart disease and cancer—can succeed.

They said the key to success is a "vast expansion of medical research," backed by a much higher level of federal appropriations and a commensurate increase in private, voluntary contributions.

The doctors said heart disease and cancer cause two out of every three deaths in the United States today, that every minute two Americans die of one or the other.

But, the panel reported, there is a "tremendous stirring of optimism" in the fields of combating both heart diseases and cancer. So, they said, "this is no time to sit still in research."

The doctors are members of the President's Conference on Heart Disease and Cancer.

Kennedy called the conference last March 15 to help chart the government's further role in a national attack on the two major causes of death in the United States.

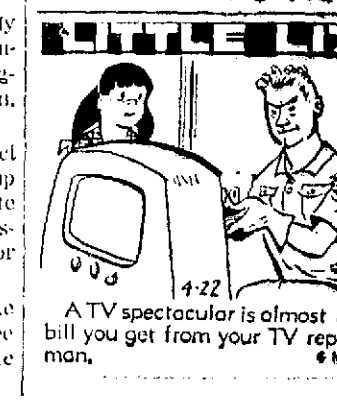

Twenty-two outstanding physicians were brought together in a conference under the chairmanship of Boiesfeuillet Jones, special assistant to the secretary of welfare for health and medical affairs.

The report made no effort to approximate the cost of what it called "the massive pooling-up of our scientific potential which can, and will, lead to new triumphs" in the field of treating heart and cancer cases, or preventing their recurrence.

In plain, nontechnical and general terms, the doctors said thousands of additional research scientists must be trained and adequate research facilities built in a bold effort to "hammer out long-range, broadly conceived scientific endeavors which encompass years of effort."

Double Tax, or Windfall for Wealthy

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—Double taxation? Or a special windfall for the wealthy?

That's the question that swirls around President Kennedy's proposal to tax dividends in full and to withhold 20 per cent of the payment at source to be sure of getting the tax.

There are about 15 million Americans who own stocks. Almost all get dividend checks and the rest wish they did.

In the first three months of this year corporations paid out $3.5 billion in cash dividends, a bit more than a year ago. Total payments tend to grow steadily, even during recessions.

But in attacking present laws granting partial deductions for tax purposes, the President declares: "About 80 per cent of it (dividend income) accrues to that 6.5 per cent of taxpayers whose incomes exceed $10,000 a year. He says that persons with incomes below $5,000 a year get only about 10 per cent of total dividend payments.

His argument is that exempting part of dividend receipts from income tax payments largely benefits the more affluent minority. He adds that repeal of this tax exemption would benefit the Treasury by $450 million a year.

Present revenue laws exclude from taxable income the first $50 of dividends received. The taxpayer then can claim a credit of 4 per cent on amounts above this $50 a year.

The partial exemptions were set up in 1954 after President Dwight D. Eisenhower brought up the big arguments against taxing dividends at all:

1. That this is double taxation, since dividends are paid out of company earnings after these have already been taxed up to 52 per cent.

2. That dividend taxation discourages investment, because it may keep some people from putting their savings in stocks. Also this tax (like all income tax payments to some extent) hampers building up funds that normally would be invested in new enterprises or in expansion of old ones.

President Kennedy says that the present partial exemptions "serve neither purpose well". He says "the broader question of tax rates applicable to high incomes" should be examined next year in a general tax reform measure.

TO HAVE AND TO KILL

By ROBERT MARTIN
THE STORY: Jim Bennett, a private detective, has been asked by a friend Max Daney to head off an embarrassing situation. The predicament was caused by the arrival of Dixie McQueen, Max's former girl friend, on the eve of his wedding to Laura Reynolds.

CHAPTER V

I got out cigarettes and offered her one. She shook her head. "Thank you, but I don't smoke."

I lit a cigarette and stalled for time, trying vainly to think of the right words. "Would you like a drink?"

Again she shook her head. "I would like some iced tea—or just a cold glass of water."

There was no velvet bell pull in the Daney drawing room, but I knew where the buttons were and went to the wall beside the fireplace and pressed one. Cecil appeared so promptly that I wondered if he had been lurking outside in the hall. "Yes, Mr. Bennett," he said quietly, a small smile on his lips. He knew, of course, that Max Daney had passed the buck to me.

"Cecil," I said, "Miss McQueen would like some iced tea."

Cecil inclined his head slightly and then cocked a black eyebrow at me. "And you sir?"

"Bourbon," I said.

He nodded gravely and left. I returned to the divan, sat down and flicked ashes into a tray on the low table.

"Gee," Dixie McQueen said "just like in the movies."

"Yes," I said. "Money does it. It is nice—money, I mean."

"Where is Max's mother?" she asked.

"Resting. She'll be down."

Her eyes were troubled. "I just don't feel right—being here, I mean. That fellow in the white coat told me that Max was not home and tried to get rid of me—told me to come back another time. From Chicago? My goodness, Max asked me to come. So I just told that fellow that I was a guest and marched right into the house."

I put out my cigarette and took a deep breath. "Look, Dixie, there's something I've got to—"

Cecil entered at that moment, crossed the room and placed a silver tray on the table before us. The tray bore a cut glass decanter of water, a small pitcher of water, a small glass filled with ice, a tall tinkling glass of iced tea complete with a candy-striped straw and a wedge of lemon impaled on the rim. Cecil straightened and enquired, "Will there be anything else?"

I nodded at the decanter. "Do you think you've brought enough bourbon?"

He smiled faintly. "I hope so, sir."

"I'll let you know if I want more. Thank you, Cecil."

He bowed slightly and left, almost a caricature of the respectful servant. He was really hamming it up.

I took another deep breath before I said, "Dixie, I have had news for you. Max isn't here, and he won't be here."

Her eyes widened as she gazed at me over the rim of the glass. "But he asked me where he is?"

"Somewhere in the East, on a business trip," I hurried on, ashamed of my lies. "He might have forgotten that you were coming or, more likely, either you or he had the date wrong."

She was silent for a moment. Then she said quietly, "He does not want me here, does he?"

"Of course he does," I looked at her and saw the hurt in her eyes. "It's just that—"

"Never mind," she said in the same quiet voice. "You don't have to lie for him."

"But I'm not lying," I lied. "I'm not going. There was an unexpected hardship to her voice."

"He invited me and I believed him and I'm staying, whether he's here or not. I even wrote him that I was coming and told him that if I did not hear from him I would arrive today. He didn't reply, and so here I am."

"He wasn't here," I said. "He didn't see your letter."

"That's not my fault," she flared. "I'm staying."

I had hatched it up, but there was no help for it now. "You can't stay," I said gently. "Max is getting married on Monday. His fiancée is arriving tonight."

She looked at me quickly, shock in her eyes. Her small chin quivered and she spoke in a choked voice. "So—that's it?"

"I'm sorry."

"Then—Max is here?"

"No. He won't be home until tomorrow." The least I could do now, I thought bleakly, was to keep Max out of it. She didn't speak for a moment. Then her eyes narrowed and she said firmly, "I'll stay until tomorrow."

"Why?"

"To tell him what I think of him."

She turned away from me and began to sob brokenly.

I had a sip of bourbon and waited. Presently her sobbing stopped and I heard her sigh. I touched her arm and as she turned I took a handkerchief from my breast pocket and handed it to her.

"I'll take you to the station," I said, making one last try.

"All right," she said dully. "I was so relieved that for a second I couldn't speak. Then I said, 'Good for you. Now you're getting smart.'"

"Yes. I—I was silly."

"Forget him," I said.

"Sure." She tossed the word off carelessly, stood up and smoothed her dress, handed me my handkerchief.

I pushed myself upward, took the handkerchief and smiled down at her. She smiled back, too brightly, but seemed in control. The best thing I could do for her was to get her on a train for Chicago. And the sooner the better. Suddenly I remembered the money Max had given me. "Let me reimburse you for your train fare."

It was a mistake.

"No, thank you." Her lips twisted.

I leaned down and lightly kissed her cheek. I didn't know why, except that she seemed so small and so alone and so hurt.

She smiled up at me, still too brightly, but with an added softness. "You're nice."

"Sure, I'm wonderful."

Perhaps she detected a faint bitterness in my voice. She said, "It's not your fault. Her gaze wavered away from mine. "What—what is she like? Young? Pretty?"

"I don't know. I haven't met her."

I started to lead her out of the room. But I stopped. Cecil stood in the archway making agitated motions with his hands, urgently trying to tell me something. I didn't get it. Then I heard the faint whirr of the elevator and in the same instant Cecil whispered hoarsely, "Mrs. Daney is coming down."

I stared at him, horrified, and said stupidly, "But it isn't six yet. She's not supposed to be down here until six."

He shrugged, spread his hands and hurried back along the hall to the kitchen, leaving me to face the music, to explain Dixie McQueen's presence to Max's mother. Not that I blamed Cecil; it was not his problem. It was my problem now and no one could help me.

I moved into the hall as the whirring stopped. The elevator door slid open and Mrs. Daney stepped out. I shot a glance over my shoulder, saw Dixie McQueen still standing by the low table.

Mrs. Daney strode toward me, smiling. "James! How nice to see you again!"

She was a handsome woman in her late fifties, elegant, poised, wearing a soft print dress of a blue and gray design. She had a rather long face, a thin prominent nose, large, intense black eyes set in deep sockets above high cheekbones. Her black hair was streaked with gray and she wore it combed severely back and coiled in a bun at the nape of her neck. I took her hand and said mechanically, "You're looking well, Mrs. Daney."

"Thank you, James. I took a capsule, but I simply could not sleep this afternoon. Tension, I suppose." She peered beyond me.

Now she fitted a cigarette into her long jade holder. I held my lighter for her.

She saw Dixie McQueen then and stopped in surprise.

From behind Mrs. Daney I waved my arms frantically at the girl and jerked my head from side to side. She stared blankly at me, at Mrs. Daney, back to me, frowning and uncertain. I thought fast and started to say something, I didn't know what. I stuttered and then the words came from somewhere as I took Mrs. Daney by the arm and propelled her toward Dixie McQueen.

"Mrs. Daney," I said heartily, "I'd like you to meet Dixie Hollis, Sandy's sister. She lives in Chicago but is on her vacation visiting Sandy for a few days and Max invited her to come with us for the weekend. She can't stay for the wedding, however, because she must be back in Chicago on Monday. Dixie, this is Mrs. Daney. I winked at Dixie and was relieved to see the sudden comprehension in her eyes; she realized what I was trying to do. She smiled at Mrs. Daney, murmured something pleasant and I sighed.

"How do you do, my dear?" Mrs. Daney said. "So pleased that you could come. But can't you possibly stay longer?"

"I'm afraid not," Dixie said. "You see, I work in a bank and my vacation ends tomorrow."

"A shame," Mrs. Daney eyed her shrewdly. "You do resemble your sister somewhat, except for the darker coloring." She turned to me. "Don't you think she takes after Sandra?"

"Yes, indeed. She's younger,

DOROTHY DIX

She Can't Forgive and Forget

By HELEN WORDEN ERSKINE

Dear Helen:

We are a young couple, age 28 and 26, married four years and expecting our second baby. Several months ago I discovered my husband had a girl friend and had rented an apartment with her.

I couldn't understand why. Our marriage has always been one of the best. My husband has a steady job, we enjoyed each other's company and have a whole some relationship. After awhile he stopped seeing this girl. I want to trust him but can't. If he could tell me how we had failed in our marriage I could forgive him, but he said there was no reason. Soon I will go to the hospital to give birth to our baby. I don't want my husband with me. I would appreciate any comments you might make on this problem. —J

Dear J.: Men for many reasons, some known only to God, are attracted by other women. You have not failed in your marriage but he, as a husband has been weak.

A rival has tried to win him Charles Stewart.

Mrs. Dullis Atkins returned from Little Rock on Tuesday where she visited her sister, Mrs. C. L. Warmack.

Mrs. W. P. Cummings and Mrs. Bob Fincher of Jonesboro returned from Ft. Worth on Monday where they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Robinson.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Ayers of Joplin, Mo. were the Monday overnight guests of Mr. and Mrs. Imon Gee.

Mrs. Charles Hesterly and Mrs. Jim Morris spent Monday in Texarkana.

Resolution by Mexico to Be Backed

By TOM HOGE

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) - Some U. N. delegates expressed belief the General Assembly's political committee would vote approval today on a Mexican resolution calling for an end to all aid to the Cuban rebels.

It was generally expected the 99-nation committee would also approve a seven-nation Latin-American resolution asking the countries of the Americas to help achieve a peaceful settlement between Cuba and the United States.

But there was some doubt that either of the two resolutions could get the two-thirds vote needed to guarantee final approval later in the assembly. Only a simple majority is required for committee passage.

Delegates generally saw no possibility that the Soviet Union could put through its proposal that the assembly condemn the United States for aggression on the ground that the anti-Castro rebels were trained and armed on U. S. soil for Monday's invasion of Cuba.

Driving to wind up the bitter debate over Cuba, the committee scheduled morning, afternoon and night meetings.

Britain came out in support of the United States Wednesday, denouncing Soviet and Cuban charges that the Americans were masterminding the attempt to overthrow Castro.

British delegate Sir Patrick Dean expressed confidence in assurances by President Kennedy and U. S. Chief Delegate Adlai E. Stevenson that the United States is not taking any part in the Cuban fighting.

Canadian delegate Wallace B. Nesbitt cautioned against the consequences of outside powers meddling in Western Hemisphere affairs.

Both Britain and Canada threw their support behind the seven-nation Latin-American resolution.

Speedy Trial Denied Trio

LITTLE ROCK (AP) - A motion for a speedy trial or bond for three Negroes accused of raping a 16-year-old white girl in North Little Rock was denied Wednesday by Pulaski Circuit Judge William J. Kirby.

Thad D. Williams, attorney for the youths, indicated he would ask the Arkansas Supreme Court to intervene in an attempt to force Kirby to comply with the motion.

All jury trials involving Negroes in Kirby's court have been delayed as a result of a recent 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling concerning Pulaski County juries.

The appellate court, in reversing the death sentence of a convicted Negro rapist, alleged racial discrimination in the selection of jurors.

Would Tighten Greece Relations

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Kennedy and Greek Prime Minister Constantine Caramanlis today called for further tightening of Greek-American ties "in the face of common dangers."

In a joint communique, the two also said they were agreed on the need to strengthen the defenses of the Atlantic community within the framework of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The communique was issued as Caramanlis made a farewell call on the President after consultations earlier this week.

The two leaders said the emergence of the new African states was welcomed by both countries, and that they recognized their responsibility to assist those new states in their growth and development.

Socialist Raps Harding College Film

NEW YORK (AP) - Veteran Socialist leader Norman Thomas said Wednesday that he had asked Defense Secretary Robert McNamara to prevent the showing in military establishments of "Communism on the Map," a film produced by the National Education Program at Searcy, Ark.

If the Defense Department does not ban the film, Thomas said at a news conference he will appeal to President Kennedy.

The film is "false and misleading" in making sweeping charges that various leaders and nations are either Communist or Communist-infiltrated, Thomas said.

Dr. George S. Benson, president of both the National Education program and Harding College at Searcy, said at Searcy, "Mrs. Thomas makes a very general statement when he says we accuse all other nations of being either Communist or Communist-infiltrated."

It is so general that it's actually true," Benson said. "According to the FBI we ourselves are infiltrated. Both England and Canada have detected, arrested and convicted spies in their own countries. We have no allies that would deny having been infiltrated."

Thomas charged that the National Education Program and the ultra-conservative Birch Society are allied in their views and that each was a "front" for the other.

Allied in views is another very general and indefinite statement," Benson replied. "They (the Birch Society) claim that their chief purpose is to oppose Communism. We (National Education Program) also oppose Communism."

"The charge that we are in any way allied is false," he declared. "We have no working agreement with the John Birch Society on anything."

Thomas said he considered the National Education Program "a more serious threat than the John Birch Society."

"If he considers we are a threat to the progress and growth of Communism," said Benson, "I am honored by it. If he means with a threat to the fundamental basic factors of our American way of life, I consider it totally false."

Benson said the purpose of the National Education Program is to "expose communism for what it is" so that the people may understand its goals and tactics. Another equally important purpose, he said, is to explain the American way of life, its achievements and "the factors that really make it tick."

POWER that sustains may be found thru regular church attendance

Prospecting

...has been part of the American Romance—always frontiers that beckon—the pot of gold at the foot of the rainbow. Forever the call of the wild; the mountain to climb; the vision for change, for movement, for progress... a stake in copper, silver, gold, oil and uranium. We owe those prospectors much.

They blazed the paths, those harbingers of wealth, civilization and culture. We are their successors but our vision differs. We must prospect for even greater good... for a new mountain pass from one country, one people, to another. We seek the gold of mutual understanding. We look for land where the new order of the ages may grow. Our Kingdom of the future must be the Kingdom of God, where love, joy and peace, will be the precious values. The Book of Books and your church offer information and inspiration for this new challenge.

You In The Church
The Church In You
-- form a combination for good. Every man, woman and child needs the influence of the church. So, come let us go into the house of the Lord. Let us support her program of service to humanity, be a faithful worker, a daily bible reader and attend services regularly.
